

HIT WITH A SANDBAG. STATE CANVASSERS.

A Brooklyn Druggist Knocked Down and Robbed.

Thieves Secured About $700 in Plunder from Him.

Two Men Arrested and Part of the Property Recovered.

Two men are under arrest in Brooklyn today charged with sandbagging and robbing Dr. John Morrisey, Jr., a well-known Brooklyn druggist, last night at the corner of Washington and Front streets.

The prisoners are Michael Shane, twenty-two years old, of 172 E. 12th street, and Cornelius Clifford, thirty-eight years old, of 103 Main street.

They were arraigned in police court and remanded.

Mrs. Eliza Duffy, sister-in-law of Police Capt. Campbell of the 11th Precinct, came out of the latter's house, at 74 West 11th street, a little after 11 o'clock to go to her home, when she saw two men robbing another at the corner.

Mrs. Duffy called to a boy named Harigan, who leads the extra car horses at that point, and sent him for a policeman. The thieves ran away, but not before she had recognized Clifford, whom she knew as an inmate.

Policeman Connolly was found by the boy and ran to the scene, the boy telling him there had been a fight.

Morrisey had risen to his feet and leaned against a wall. He struck out blindly at the officer, who, thinking him drunk, clubbed him and took him to the Second Precinct station.

After a time Morrisey recovered his senses, and stated that he had crossed from New York on the Catherine street ferry, and was walking up Washington street when he was struck in the head from behind and fell unconscious.

He says he can remember nothing from that time until after he was taken to the station. After he had revived he found that he had been robbed of a diamond stud worth $300, a gold watch and chain worth $160 and $200 in bills.

There were evidences that the thieves had tried to wrench a diamond ring from his finger.

Mrs. Duffy came to the station-house and told what she had seen. Clifford had stood guard, she said, over the prostrate man while Shane went through his pockets.

Upon her statements the officers had difficulty in finding and arresting the men.

When they were searched at the station-house Dr. Morrisey's diamond stud was found upon Clifford and the watch and chain upon Shane, besides a portion of the money.

The police say that Shane has only been out of Elmira Reformatory a month and after Dr. Morrisey was badly injured by the blow that he received in the back of the head, and the officers believe he was struck with a sandbag.

He is not considered to be dangerously injured, however.

Dr. Morrisey is a son of the proprietor of the Always Open Pharmacy, at Washington and Fulton streets, and lives at 313 Smith street.

NOT MRS. MUTTER'S SLAYER.

Her Husband Fails to Identify Harlot as the Man.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
FREDERICK, N. J., Dec. 2.—The belief that Louis Harlot, the French farm hand, who is suspected of having brutally murdered Mrs. Chas. T. Leonard at Atlantic Highlands last Friday, has strangled more than one defenseless woman, has been partially if not entirely dispelled by the failure of the husband of one of his supposed victims to identify him.

When Ferdinand Mutter, who owns a dairy farm in Newark's suburbs, read of Mrs. Leonard's murder and the subsequent arrest of her supposed slayer he was at once convinced that Harlot was the same man who killed his wife two years ago while he was away on his milk route.

He had secured a description of his wife's slayer from a far neighbor, who had been bound and gagged by the assassin, and had searched for the murderer in vain.

He visited Farmer Leonard at Atlantic Highlands and obtained from him a description of Harlot. So closely did the descriptions tally and so similar were the murderers' methods in each case, both victims having been strangled with heavy belts and their faces and heads horribly beaten, that Mutter was all the more convinced.

He hastened here last night and was conducted to Harlot's cell. Thinking that at last he had surely discovered his wife's murderer, Mutter gazed at him intently for a few moments, and then, with a regretful sigh, said:

"It is not the man."
"Are you sure?" asked the keeper.
"Yes, I am positive," replied Mutter.

KENNEDY WAS TWEED'S ALLY.

Record of the Syracuse Judge Who Rails at Gov. Hill.

THE WORLD published this morning a revelation of the connection of Supreme Court Justice George N. Kennedy, of Syracuse, who has recently made partisan attacks on Gov. Hill with the infamous Tweed ring of 1870.

George N. Kennedy was the Republican senator from the Syracuse district during the ninety-first, ninety-second, ninety-third and ninety-fourth sessions, and the records of the Senate show that, through the aid of Kennedy and his colleague, William B. Woodin, of the Auburn district, Tweed was able to pass the charter of 1870.

A committee, which included Horace Greeley, Charles J. Folger, William Cullen Bryant, William D. Dodge and Silas Tousey, went to Albany to protest against the passage of the charter, and Mr. Greeley spoke in opposition to it before the committee having the bill under consideration.

Senator Kennedy's personal objection to the objects with an explanation in favor of the Tweed measure, and the record shows that he was the chief engineer who forced the passage of the charter and the accompanying Election law for New York City—also a Tweed measure—on the floor of the Senate.

Tweed did not have enough votes to pass his pet measure without securing the services of Republican members, and there were rumors current that six Republican votes had been bought for cash at prices ranging in the thousands of dollars.

The Talk of the Town
In Fifth Street of Fine Furniture at half last night's price.

THEY MEET AND DECLARE THE ELECTION OF FOUR CONGRESSMEN.

Further Orders for Stays Granted by Supreme Court Judges.

Inspector Welch Arrested and Bailed Out at Syracuse.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
ALBANY, Dec. 2.—The State Board of Canvassers began its session this morning at 11 o'clock, before a large and interested audience, mainly composed of counsel for the various candidates, over whose election contests have arisen.

The present were William A. Sutcliffe, of Rochester, the defeated Republican candidate for Attorney-General; George Bliss, New York; John A. Parkhurst, Judge Cary, Hudson; Matthew Hale, Albany; Franklin D. Sherwood, Hornellsville; Edgar Ridgway, New York; Judge Schoonmaker, Kingston; Judge Albert, Otsego; Senator Collins and counsel.

When proceedings opened there was some lively wrangling by the legal representatives of the Republicans because the State Board was undecided whether or not to allow the papers relating to the several contests to be seen by counsel.

George Bliss, red in the face as he declared that, as the representative for Mr. Derby in the sixteenth District Senatorial dispute, he had the right to inspect the papers.

Finally he was permitted to see Senator Collins's protest, but neither he nor any other of the counsel were granted the privilege of examining any of the other documents on file until the Board reaches those cases.

Secretary of State Rice took occasion to say that where contests were pending in the courts the State Board would not violate any judicial orders.

The Board proceeded to canvass the congressional returns and declared the following candidates duly elected:

Second District, Alfred C. Chapin; Tenth District, William Bourke Cockran; Twelfth District, Joseph J. Little; Twenty-second District, Newton M. Curtis.

An adjournment was then taken until tomorrow at 11 A. M.

Another Order Served.
(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
ALBANY, Dec. 2.—Another order was served upon the members of the State Board of Canvassers this morning just previous to the time for its meeting.

It was an order granted by Judge Landau, at Schenectady, ordering that until the return of the order granted by Judge Edwards, at Troy, yesterday, requiring the State Board of Canvassers to show cause in the Sherwood case, and, until the final determination thereon, all proceedings on the part of the State Board of Canvassers and of the individual members thereof shall be stayed with reference to the recognition of the resolution of the Sherwood County Board of Canvassers, read of Mrs. Leonard's murder and the subsequent arrest of her supposed slayer he was at once convinced that Harlot was the same man who killed his wife two years ago while he was away on his milk route.

He had secured a description of his wife's slayer from a far neighbor, who had been bound and gagged by the assassin, and had searched for the murderer in vain.

He visited Farmer Leonard at Atlantic Highlands and obtained from him a description of Harlot. So closely did the descriptions tally and so similar were the murderers' methods in each case, both victims having been strangled with heavy belts and their faces and heads horribly beaten, that Mutter was all the more convinced.

He hastened here last night and was conducted to Harlot's cell. Thinking that at last he had surely discovered his wife's murderer, Mutter gazed at him intently for a few moments, and then, with a regretful sigh, said:

"It is not the man."
"Are you sure?" asked the keeper.
"Yes, I am positive," replied Mutter.

THE WORLD published this morning a revelation of the connection of Supreme Court Justice George N. Kennedy, of Syracuse, who has recently made partisan attacks on Gov. Hill with the infamous Tweed ring of 1870.

George N. Kennedy was the Republican senator from the Syracuse district during the ninety-first, ninety-second, ninety-third and ninety-fourth sessions, and the records of the Senate show that, through the aid of Kennedy and his colleague, William B. Woodin, of the Auburn district, Tweed was able to pass the charter of 1870.

A committee, which included Horace Greeley, Charles J. Folger, William Cullen Bryant, William D. Dodge and Silas Tousey, went to Albany to protest against the passage of the charter, and Mr. Greeley spoke in opposition to it before the committee having the bill under consideration.

Senator Kennedy's personal objection to the objects with an explanation in favor of the Tweed measure, and the record shows that he was the chief engineer who forced the passage of the charter and the accompanying Election law for New York City—also a Tweed measure—on the floor of the Senate.

Tweed did not have enough votes to pass his pet measure without securing the services of Republican members, and there were rumors current that six Republican votes had been bought for cash at prices ranging in the thousands of dollars.

The Talk of the Town
In Fifth Street of Fine Furniture at half last night's price.

THE WORLD published this morning a revelation of the connection of Supreme Court Justice George N. Kennedy, of Syracuse, who has recently made partisan attacks on Gov. Hill with the infamous Tweed ring of 1870.

George N. Kennedy was the Republican senator from the Syracuse district during the ninety-first, ninety-second, ninety-third and ninety-fourth sessions, and the records of the Senate show that, through the aid of Kennedy and his colleague, William B. Woodin, of the Auburn district, Tweed was able to pass the charter of 1870.

A committee, which included Horace Greeley, Charles J. Folger, William Cullen Bryant, William D. Dodge and Silas Tousey, went to Albany to protest against the passage of the charter, and Mr. Greeley spoke in opposition to it before the committee having the bill under consideration.

Senator Kennedy's personal objection to the objects with an explanation in favor of the Tweed measure, and the record shows that he was the chief engineer who forced the passage of the charter and the accompanying Election law for New York City—also a Tweed measure—on the floor of the Senate.

Tweed did not have enough votes to pass his pet measure without securing the services of Republican members, and there were rumors current that six Republican votes had been bought for cash at prices ranging in the thousands of dollars.

The Talk of the Town
In Fifth Street of Fine Furniture at half last night's price.

THE WORLD published this morning a revelation of the connection of Supreme Court Justice George N. Kennedy, of Syracuse, who has recently made partisan attacks on Gov. Hill with the infamous Tweed ring of 1870.

George N. Kennedy was the Republican senator from the Syracuse district during the ninety-first, ninety-second, ninety-third and ninety-fourth sessions, and the records of the Senate show that, through the aid of Kennedy and his colleague, William B. Woodin, of the Auburn district, Tweed was able to pass the charter of 1870.

A committee, which included Horace Greeley, Charles J. Folger, William Cullen Bryant, William D. Dodge and Silas Tousey, went to Albany to protest against the passage of the charter, and Mr. Greeley spoke in opposition to it before the committee having the bill under consideration.

Senator Kennedy's personal objection to the objects with an explanation in favor of the Tweed measure, and the record shows that he was the chief engineer who forced the passage of the charter and the accompanying Election law for New York City—also a Tweed measure—on the floor of the Senate.

Tweed did not have enough votes to pass his pet measure without securing the services of Republican members, and there were rumors current that six Republican votes had been bought for cash at prices ranging in the thousands of dollars.

ENGLAND'S LATEST SCANDAL. IN A PADDED ROOM.

Countess Russell Again on the Witness Stand.

The Earl's Friends Claim That He Has a Complete Defense.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
LONDON, Dec. 2.—The interest in the suit of Countess Russell against her husband, Earl Russell, for a judicial separation, was enhanced by the publication of the proceedings of yesterday.

Long before the opening this morning of the Divorce Division of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice an eager throng gathered about the doors, those not having tickets hoping they would have an opportunity to get at least a chance to stand in the rear of the court-room to listen to the exposure of the manner of life of one of England's peers.

The crowd made very audible comments on the testimony given by Countess Russell yesterday, and it was evident that their sympathy was with the fair plaintiff.

It is not known generally what evidence the Earl will submit to offset the charges made against him, but his friends declare that he has a complete defense. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

His friends declare that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing. They add that when the public hears the defendant's side of the case the whole matter will assume a new aspect and that the Earl will be found to be a man of high character and high standing.

EHRICH BROTHERS.

WILL OFFER FOR BALANCE OF THIS WEEK IN THEIR

Cloak Department.

100 Cheviot Cloth Jackets, with full Shawl Astrakhan Collar, half silk lined, worth $12.50, at $7.98.

100 Cloth Jackets, full shawl Brook Mink Collar, with animal heads and loops, worth $12.75, at $8.98.

100 Cloth Jackets, Angora Shawl and Collar, half silk lined, worth $14.50, at $9.75.

100 fine Cheviot Jackets, Astrakhan fur Shawl Collar, with animal heads, loops, &c., worth $15.00, at $10.50.

100 fine Cheviot Cloth Reefers, double-breasted, worth $7.00, at $4.98.

100 fine Camel's Hair Reefers, double-breasted, bone buttons, worth $8.00, at $5.98.

100 fine Bedford Cord Top-Coats, silk-lined, worth $19.00, at $13.98.

250 Imported and Domestic Cloth Capes, no two alike, at 50 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR.

150 Long Cloth Ulsters, with deep military capes, worth $15.00, at $10.50.

100 welt seam Kersey Top Coats, worth $25.00, at $18.50.

EIDERDOWN WRAPPERS

in light blue, pink, cardinal, navy, gray and Carnet; the Princess back, with full front, shirred at the neck and finished at waist with belt or girdle; value $6.90; reduced to $3.69.

Sixth Avenue and 23d Street.

DEFAULTER END TO RETURN. FRACTURED A BOY'S SKULL.

Report that He Will Surrender One Man Threw a Scale Weight to the District Attorney.

On the heels of the exposure of the operations of Edward M. Field, comes the rumor that John C. Eno, the son of a wealthy and honorable home, who fled from New York in 1884, a debtor to the extent of nearly $500,000, is about to return from his exile.

"Johnny" Eno was President of the Second National Bank. After the Grant & Ward and Marine Bank failures it was found that the Second National was insolvent.

Amos E. Eno was then seventy-five years old, but he sturdily turned in with his hard-earned fortune to sustain the bank through the troubles brought on by his son, who was known as a "blood."

He had a charming wife and three beautiful little daughters, but he fled from criminal prosecution to Canada, where he was joined later by his family.

"Eno has lived quietly with his family in a house at Quebec that did not cost more than $40,000," said an intimate friend this morning.

All of the stories that have come over the line to the effect that he was hiding and putting in Canada are untrue. It is said that he is now in New York, and that he is not a "blood."

Rumor says that John C. Eno has been employed by the City of New York in a few days' surrender himself at the District Attorney's office, ask for bail and then settle back into New York life, while the case against him will be dropped.

EHRICH BROTHERS.

WILL OFFER FOR BALANCE OF THIS WEEK IN THEIR

Cloak Department.

100 Cheviot Cloth Jackets, with full Shawl Astrakhan Collar, half silk lined, worth $12.50, at $7.98.

100 Cloth Jackets, full shawl Brook Mink Collar, with animal heads and loops, worth $12.75, at $8.98.

100 Cloth Jackets, Angora Shawl and Collar, half silk lined, worth $14.50, at $9.75.

100 fine Cheviot Jackets, Astrakhan fur Shawl Collar, with animal heads, loops, &c., worth $15.00, at $10.50.

100 fine Cheviot Cloth Reefers, double-breasted, worth $7.00, at $4.98.

100 fine Camel's Hair Reefers, double-breasted, bone buttons, worth $8.00, at $5.98.

100 fine Bedford Cord Top-Coats, silk-lined, worth $19.00, at $13.98.

250 Imported and Domestic Cloth Capes, no two alike, at 50 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR.

150 Long Cloth Ulsters, with deep military capes, worth $15.00, at $10.50.

100 welt seam Kersey Top Coats, worth $25.00, at $18.50.

EIDERDOWN WRAPPERS

in light blue, pink, cardinal, navy, gray and Carnet; the Princess back, with full front, shirred at the neck and finished at waist with belt or girdle; value $6.90; reduced to $3.69.

Sixth Avenue and 23d Street.

DEFAULTER END TO RETURN. FRACTURED A BOY'S SKULL.

Report that He Will Surrender One Man Threw a Scale Weight to the District Attorney.

On the heels of the exposure of the operations of Edward M. Field, comes the rumor that John C. Eno, the son of a wealthy and honorable home, who fled from New York in 1884, a debtor to the extent of nearly $500,000, is about to return from his exile.

"Johnny" Eno was President of the Second National Bank. After the Grant & Ward and Marine Bank failures it was found that the Second National was insolvent.

Amos E. Eno was then seventy-five years old, but he sturdily turned in with his hard-earned fortune to sustain the bank through the